

Icelandair is a transatlantic airline, with over 80 years of operational experience, offering flights to, from, via and within Iceland. The airline operates out of Iceland as a hub and makes use of the country's geographical location, midway between North America and Europe, building an ever-growing network of international routes. There are 27 European destinations and 15 North American gateways in operation in 2022. The network is based on a 24-hour rotation, with connecting flights leaving Iceland in the mornings and afternoons providing fast and easy connections across the Atlantic.
